Attorney Suing Delta Is Giving Proceeds to Charity

The Manhattan attorney who has recently received national attention for commencing litigation on behalf of his family against Delta Airlines for a family vacation that went awry has announced that all proceeds of the lawsuit recovered above his expenses will be donated to charity. Richard A. Roth, of The Roth Law Firm, PLLC, recently stated: "this lawsuit was never about me nor about my family. It concerns Delta's numbness to the traveler." He went on to state he received an outpouring of support from all corners of the world. "Thousands of people have contacted me via emails, letters and telephone calls congratulating me for taking on Delta. This matter, frankly, has become a David versus Goliath story. I am therefore donating all proceeds above my family and law firm expenses to a wonderful cause: The Wounded Warrior Project, a charity that could use any moneys obtained from this case."

The Wounded Warrior Project, at www.woundedwarriorproject.org, is a not for profit organization which aids severely injured service members and raises awareness for the needs of severely injured service men and women.
